We sincerely hope that this guidebook will be an enjoyable reading, lead our readers to have a better understanding on the MICE industry in Shanghai and help them set up successful MICE events in the city.

Shanghai Municipal Tourism Administrative Commission

Shanghai Municipal Tourism Administrative Commission (SMTAC), under the Shanghai Municipal Government, is a regulating arm in charge of drafting the master plans and strategies for developing the city's tourism industry, implementing the trade policies and regulations, and coordinating the operations of related organs and businesses in the industry. It is also responsible of promoting the travel industry and travel products in both home and overseas markets.

Under the SMTAC is a specific department— International Tourism Promotion Dept. responsible for promoting Shanghai as an ideal MICE destination as well as the city's MICE industry. The department has launched SMTAC's web site www.meet-in-shanghai.net and established a database. Its major responsibility is to apply to host the meetings in Shanghai, organize or coordinate the organization of meetings in Shanghai and provide training to the people in the MICE industry. Major MICE events SMTAC is involved on the regular basis include China International Travel Mart (CITM), which is held every two years; World Travel Fair, co-organized by the MICE department and VNU; and China Business Travel Forum, co-organized by the MICE department and American Express.

ALL ABOUT Shanghai

Shanghai, China's Economic Powerhouse

The economic reform and China's opening policy has nurtured a strong momentum for the robust economic growth in Shanghai, which has grown to be an international hub of finance, transportation and commerce. The city's status as an economic powerhouse in China has epitomized what the country is striving to go - a rich city with its rich people and a rich culture.

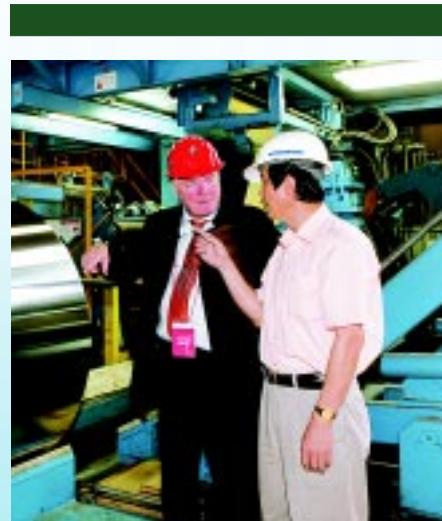

In 2005, Shanghai chalked up GDP of RMB914.4 billion, ranking 7th on the GDP list of the nation. The city's GDP growth was reported 11.1 percent, two percent more than the national average. The profitability of industrial enterprises in Shanghai is the highest in China. And Shanghai remains No.3 in terms of exports, following Guangdong and Jiangsu provinces. The actual foreign investment the city attracted has accounted for a larger proportion of the nation's total. It is the fifth largest destination for foreign investment in China. Overseas investors have played a significant role in boosting the economy of Shanghai. To date, 300 of Fortune 500 companies have set up offices in Shanghai and there are more than 30,000 foreign-invested enterprises in operation.

◆ Shanghai is also the international financial hub in China. There are 84 foreign banks and financial companies operating in Shanghai, with a total asset of RMB48.4 billion. Of them, 65 have been approved to provide RMB services, with their Chinese currency assets totaling RMB114.5 billion. In August, 2005, People's Bank of China announced the inauguration of its Shanghai headquarters, which not only facilitated the smooth implementation of macro regulation measures of the central bank, but also greatly increased the overall impact of Shanghai on the financial industries in China and the Asia Pacific region. In addition, one of the China's two stock exchanges, China's futures exchange, and the national diamond trading market are all located in Shanghai.

◆ In 2005, Shanghai Port exceeded the Port of Singapore for the first time in terms of cargo volume it handled yearly and thus ranked No.1 among the cargo ports in the world. In addition, the container industry of the city continues to show a strong growth, which makes Shanghai Port No.3 among container ports in the world and further shortens the distance between itself and the ports of Singapore and Hong Kong. For three years in row, Shanghai has ranked first among all the domestic airports in terms of three major transportation indexes-the number of passengers and the volume of cargo the airports handle every year, and the number of flights that take off and land in Shanghai. Pudong International Airport ranks 8th in the world in terms of the cargo it handled in 2005. In addition, domestic and foreign airlines are planning to launch more flights and open more air routes linking Shanghai and other parts of the world.

Shanghai, a Cosmopolitan with Great Potentials

With further investment poured in from both domestic and overseas businesses, the economy of Shanghai will gain stronger momentum in future. Its leading role in China's economy will be further consolidated and its reputation as an international hub of finance, and transportation.

◆ The target the local government has drafted in its developing plan for the 2006-2010 period is to speed up the construction of the international financial center and the international transportation hub in Shanghai, further develop Pudong, host a successful World Expo 2010 and incorporate the city's developing plan into the national program to continue boosting the economy in the Yangtze Delta region. In its official agenda, Shanghai plans to maintain its annual economic growth at nine percent minimum and to achieve GDP at 1500 billion yuan by 2010. The service industry has been given top priority on the developing agenda of the Shanghai government, in which the sectors of finance, logistics and culture will be attached with more significance.

◆ The city's infrastructure construction is keeping on moving on a fast track. A taller building is soon to be completed next to Jin Mao Tower. The Pudong International Airport is being expanded to host more airlines while the city's No.1 exhibition venue, Shanghai New International Expo Center, has started its second phase of construction to offer more space to world-class events. Yangshan Deep-Water Port opened for operation in December, marking a breakthrough of the effort to build Shanghai into an international shipping center. And more landmark urban structures are believed to debut in Shanghai before the city hosts the World Expo in 2010, including a group of top-class meeting and exhibition venues.

Shanghai, the Origin of a Diversified Culture

It was the opening of Shanghai to foreign trading after the Opium War in the mid-19th century that brought in a huge influx of people from the West, who later not only set up their businesses in the city, but also settled down with their families in the city. Growing wealth and merging talents turned Shanghai into the most luminous city in the Far East in the 1920s and 1930s. Thanks to the city's long history of being a trading hub and under Western influence, Shanghainese, including the young generations of Chinese from other parts of the country who grew up in this cosmopolitan city, are known for their unique persona. Shanghai people are generally thought to be suave, stylish, sophisticated, smart, open-minded and down-to-earth.

- ◆ The largest cosmopolitan city on Chinese mainland, Shanghai has a very open society. Shanghainese are apt to accept new ideas. This contributes to a highly flexible culture and the city's dynamic and rapid evolution. Elements of Western influence blend well into Chinese tradition, which could be detected from the city's sophisticated culture and the modern lifestyle of local people. However, the clashes of ideas of different cultures are inevitable, particularly among the younger generation.

Shanghai, a Destination of Urban Travel

Without significant natural sightseeing resources, Shanghai appeals travelers with its strong urban characters - architecture built in different eras, museums of diversified subjects, a multitude of restaurants and night life spots, tantalizing shopping malls, and a rainbow of cultural and art events.

◆ In 2005, Shanghai received 5.7 million overseas travelers and 90 million domestic travelers, up 16 percent and six per cent respectively over the previous year. Of overseas travelers, 4.4 million spent at least one night in the city. The total income of the city's travel industry in 2005 was 160 billion yuan, up nine percent over the year before and accounting for six percent of the city's GDP. By the end of 2005, the number of star-rated hotels in Shanghai totaled 354 and the number of travel agencies 763, of which 52 were international travel agencies.

◆ Meeting and exhibition has topped the working agenda of the city's tourism developing authorities. MICE sector is expected to grow to be a significant revenue resource for the city's travel industry. A large number international meetings and exhibitions are held in Shanghai on a regular basis. And Shanghai is further improving its MICE facilities and service standards, in hopes to turn the city into a major MICE destination in Asia Pacific region and even in the world.

Shanghai, the Host City to the World Expo 2010

The World Expo 2010 is going to become a milestone not only in the MICE industry of Shanghai, but the history of China. Shanghai is the first city that hosts the World Expo in China. Therefore, the city government has made all efforts to make sure the success of hosting the largest exhibition in the world in Shanghai. The World Expo 2010, if successful, is believed to boost the city's MICE industry to a much higher level, and help bring more world top-class MICE events to Shanghai.

◆ Shanghai has allocated 5.28 square kilometers along the Huangpu River in the southern part of downtown as the planned Expo area, of which 1.35 square meters in Puxi and 3.93 square kilometers in Pudong. The relocation of residents and businesses on the planned lot has been smoothly carried out while the construction of major Expo venues has kicked off. By mid-August, 56 countries and six international organizations had signed up for the World Expo 2010 in Shanghai. The colossal amount of money being poured into different aspects in the run-up to 2010 is giving the city a complete face-lift. Shanghai planned to invest US $ 2.5 billion to build the World Expo venue and five international exhibition halls on a land of more than five square kilometers to host exhibitors from about 200 countries. The total investment in this global event is expected to reach US $ 3 billion. About 20 billion yuan will be invested in improving city's telecommunications, power and water supply. It is estimated that the huge investment in infrastructure will advance the city's developing pace by at least ten years' time. This will undoubtedly add aura to Shanghai as a MICE destination.

WORLD EXPO 2010

◆ The World Expo 2010 is expected to bring lucrative opportunities to businesses from both home and abroad. It is estimated by the city's tourism authorities that 130 million to 150 million Chinese tourists and five to six million overseas tourists will visit Shanghai in 2010. It is estimated that 30 per cent to 50 per cent of the visitors to the Expo would plan to travel leisurely in China. This is going to bring huge profits to the city's travel industry. The travel industry is expected to contribute 10 per cent in the growth of the city's GDP.

AN EMERGING mice destination

Official statistics show that from 2000 to 2004, the number of meetings of all kinds increased from 4,899 annually to 33,000, with participants growing from 1.1 million to 1.5 million. In 2005, the city hosted 306 large-scale exhibitions, about ten percent more than that of 2003. It is estimated that one third of overseas visitors that come to Shanghai every year are more or less involved in meeting and exhibitions. Plus those among the domestic travelers, the market could be as big as 17.7 million visitors. The number of exhibition-related businesses has grown to 8,000-strong. More world-class conventions are held in Shanghai. The city is rising to be a major MICE destination in Asia Pacific region. The development of MICE industry in Shanghai has been substantially backed up the city's robust economy, geographically advantageous location, well-developed transportation system, top-class MICE venues and supporting facilities, and strong preferential policies drafted by the city government.

- ◆ Shanghai is the biggest economic powerhouse in China, with its GDP ranking first in the country and its GDP per capita reaching the average level of the world's developed countries. The purchasing power of people in Shanghai is extraordinarily growing, while the influx of investment continues to pump into vitality into the city's economy. Located in the middle of China's eastern coastal line and the heart of the Yangtze Delta, Shanghai is a gateway into the vast country for overseas investors and visitors as well as an outlet for Chinese business to trade with foreign partners and to export their products to the lucrative global market. An aviation hub is forming in Shanghai, a city of two airports. And the Yangshan Deep-Water Port has claimed the title of the biggest port in the world. The formidable capacity of the city's logistic industry and communication industry is the indispensable condition for a strong MICE industry. In addition, the city owns world-class MICE venues, including seven large-scale exhibition centers, more than 300 star-rated hotels with conference facilities, one international convention center, and 100-plus companies specialized in operating MICE venues and its related businesses.

- ◆ To render its full support to the city's MICE industry, Shanghai municipal government has created a preferential policy environment, in hopes to draw more international MICE operators to Shanghai as well as encourage local businesses in the MICE industry to expand their overseas presence. In mid-2005, the city government put into effect the Regulations for the Shanghai Exhibition Industry, an effort to make sure a healthy and organized industry. Procedures to get official approvals from the city government have been simplified and are becoming more expedient and easier. Only three government departments are in charge of granting such approvals: the foreign affairs office for international conferences, Shanghai Foreign Economic Relation and Trade Commission for trade exhibitions, the commission of science and technology for exhibitions related to science and technology. In the city government's 11th Five-Year Plan, it is stated that the huge efforts would be made in the 2006-2010 period to develop the MICE industry in Shanghai. Topping the agenda is certainly the World Expo 2010.

◆ This world largest exhibition will push the global presence of Shanghai onto a new level. The largest cosmopolitan city in China, Shanghai has become a window for the international communities to witness a fast growing economy in one of the most populous nations in the world. The summit of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in Shanghai in 2006 is evidence that how significant the strategic position the city has claimed as a MICE destination in Asia Pacific region. The upcoming Special Olympics Summer Games in 2007 and the World Expo in 2010 are among the large number international MICE events Shanghai is to host.

Meeting in Shanghai

Shanghai offers meeting organizers first-class venues. The city's top conference venue is the Shanghai International Convention Center, where the summit of Shanghai Cooperation Organization in 2006, the APEC leaders' summit in 2001 and the Global Fortune Forum in 1999 were held. Besides, conference space is available in a large number of high-end hotels in the city, with comprehensive start-of-the-art facilities. The top choices are the city's 25 five-star hotels and 40 four-star hotels, most of which are operated by such international brands as Starwood, Accor, Shangri-La, Ritz-Carlton, Le Meridien, Hyatt and Holiday Inn. Between 2005 and 2007, about 30 five- and four-star hotels will be built in Shanghai.

◆ The city boasts rich resources of conferences. There are about 50 universities and colleges, among which the top national ones are Fudan, Jiao Tong and Tongji, plus hundreds of national-level and city-level research institutes, including the National Academy of Sciences Shanghai branch and Shanghai Academy of Social Sciences. More than half of the Global 500 companies have established their presence in Shanghai, including making investment, and setting up joint ventures, offices, R&D centers, and even their China or Asia-Pacific headquarters. By the end of 2005, the number of foreign-invested businesses in Shanghai had totaled 29,000 and the number of overseas representative offices 1,900. About 170 R&D centers under foreign companies have been set up in Shanghai. And a total of 124 transnational companies have opened their regional headquarters in the city.

◆ The meetings held in Shanghai can be broken down into two major types: commercial meetings and non-commercial meetings. The number of commercial meetings is large but their scales small, while the number of non-commercial meetings is small but their scales big. In a developing plan drafted by the Shanghai Municipal Tourism Administrative Commission, it is pointed out that efforts will be made in the next couple of years to tap the potential market of non-commercial meetings. The local meeting organizers and government departments are encouraged to expand their presence in the global market by applying to host more large world-class non-commercial meetings in Shanghai, by which the city will earn more international recognition and reputation as a major MICE destination.

Meeting in Shanghai - Case Study

Shanghai Cooperation Organization

Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) was established in June 15, 2001 in Shanghai. Its members include China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan. It was decided on the Astana summit in July, 2005 that Shanghai would host the 2006 summit.

- ◆ The summit, held in the Shanghai International Convention Center, coincided with the fifth anniversary of the establishment of the SCO and the 10th anniversary of founding the "Shanghai Five" mechanism. During the summit, the heads of member countries issued a declaration, approved the next Secretary-General of the Organization, regional director of the executive committee for anti-terrorism agencies, and signed a number of documents on cross-sectors cooperation.

International Conference on Software Engineering

International Conference on Software Engineering (ICSE), founded in 1975, is an annual meeting for the international software industry. Its main organizers include the international Association of Computer Machinery (ACM) and the International Electrical and Electronic Engineers - Computer Society (IEEE-CS). The previous 27 sessions were all held in the US, Europe and developed countries in Asia.

- ◆ The 28th ICSE was held in Shanghai International Convention Center between May 20 and 28, 2006. About 1,000 software engineering elites from all over the world attended the conference. In addition to formal meetings and technical meetings, key speeches by guests, there were also series of seminars, lectures on the latest technology and exhibitions, creating an excellent platform for participants to communicate and exchange experiences.

Exhibition in Shanghai

In 2005, 276 international exhibitions were held in Shanghai, with a total exhibition area of 3.76 million square meters, 700,000 square meters more than the previous year. Nearly 40 percent of the exhibitions were organized by companies from other provinces and overseas, accounting for about half the exhibition areas. In 2004, only 30 percent of the exhibitions were organized by non-local companies. And the percentage was only 20 percent in 2003. Shanghai is obviously becoming a major stage for national and international exhibitions.

- ◆ The city's exhibition industry is backed up by world-class venues and supporting facilities. By the year 2010, the total area of the Shanghai New Expo Center, which was jointly invested by German exhibition giants, will have reached 330,000 square meters, becoming the largest exhibition venue in the city. With this and the other exhibition venues, plus the permanent exhibitions after the World Expo 2010, Shanghai will have 500,000 square meters of exhibition space in total, ranking number one in Asia.

◆ The rapid growth of the exhibition industry is fueled by the robust economy in Shanghai as well as in the Yangtze Delta. SHANGHAITEX, for instance, has become one of the largest textile trade shows in Asia. Industrial analysts conclude the success of SHANGHAITEX is largely attributed to the strong textile industry in East China. In 2005, the total export of textile machinery from China was US $ 871 million, up 30 percent over the previous year, of which 96 percent was contributed by East China.

◆ In the past few years, various ministries of the central government and national trade associations moved their trade fairs and exhibitions to Shanghai. In addition, more than 40 international exhibitions of specific trades are held in Shanghai on a regular basis, which range in a broad variety of industries, including automotive, electronics, computer, telecommunication, family appliance, medical instrument, moldings, shipping, furniture, garment and food. Most of these exhibitions have won recognitions from global counterparts and industrial giants. On top of such list are such major shows as Auto Shanghai and East China Fair.

Exhibition in Shanghai - Case Study

Auto Shanghai

Auto Shanghai, founded in 1985, is an international trade show for auto industry. In June 2004, Auto Shanghai was granted authentication of the UFI, becoming the first auto exhibition in China that has won the UFI's recognition. The 11th Auto Shanghai in 2005 was held in the Shanghai New International Expo Center. The whole exhibition covers a total of 120,000 square meters. Exhibitors were 1,036 manufacturers from 26 countries and regions, including international auto giants and leading Chinese auto makers. About 5,380 journalists from 1,020 news organizations in 35 countries and regions covered the event. A total of 391,593 people from 113 countries and regions visited the exhibition.

◆ The 12th Auto Shanghai will be held between April 22 and 28, 2007 in the Shanghai New International Expo Center. By then, all nine indoor exhibition halls will be opened, with a total area of more than 140,000 square meters. The exhibition organizers will invite famous auto designing companies from Europe, the US and Asia to display the latest auto technology on the exhibition.

The International Industrial Fair

The International Industrial Fair, founded in 1999, is an annual exhibition held in Shanghai every November. It is a large national-level industrial trade fair of showing and selling China's high-tech equipments. High-tech products are displayed to domestic and foreign businesses and the latest information of technology in trade is also available on the exhibition. The International Industrial Fair 2006 was co-organized by the State Development and Reform Commission, the Ministry of Commerce, the Ministry of Science and Technology, the Ministry of Information Industry, the Ministry of Education, the Chinese Academy of Sciences, the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade, and the Shanghai Municipal Government.

It consists of six professional exhibitions. They are information technology and equipment exhibition, numerically controlled machine tools and specialized equipment exhibition, energy equipment exhibition, industrial automation exhibition, environmental technology and equipment exhibition. The whole exhibition covered an area of 103,500 square meters, with about 4,500 booths.

- ◆ With the growing reputation of the International Industrial Fair, more and more famous enterprises in China and from abroad are signing up the exhibition. Currently, it has become the platform for showcasing, trading and evaluating China's high-tech industry, high-tech equipments and products.

East China Fair

East China Import and Export Commodity Fair, known as East China Fair, is the largest and most influential international trade show in the region, with the largest number of participating traders and the largest trading volumes recorded. East China Fair is started on March 1 ever year in Shanghai.

- ◆ Since 1991, 15 East China Fairs have been successfully held. The 15th East China Fair drew 20,500 traders from 150 countries and regions as well as more than 60,000 Chinese industrial clients. Contracts signed during the fair were worth nearly US $ 3 billion in export volume.

- ◆ The 16 th East China Fair was held in Shanghai New International Expo Center between March 1 and 6 this year. The whole exhibition covered a total of 100,000 square meters, with 5,000-plus standard booths. Textile apparel and light industry handicraft were two new categories on this year's fair, an effort to specialize the show.

An Incentive Shanghai

Incentive Travel Venues

A cosmopolitan city with rich cultural and historical heritage, Shanghai offers abundant venues for incentive travel planners.

Mollar Villa

Located at 30 Shaanxi Road S in central downtown, Mollar Villa was built in the late 1930s by a wealthy Jewish tycoon whose last name was Mollar. The garden-cum villa, featuring colorful Northern European characters, was designed according to a house that Mollar's daughter dreamed about. The villa house has been restored into a hotel. There is a small, cozy coffee shop on the ground level, from where people could enjoy the serene and beautiful view of the lush garden.

Three on the Bund & Bund 18

In an historical building at the corner of the Bund and Guangdong Road, Three on the Bund is a high-end lifestyle center that houses four restaurants, a bar, a spa, a gallery and boutique shops under the same roof of the seven-floor building, dating back to the colonial age of Shanghai. One of the restaurants is operated by Jean Georges, a New York-based celebrity chef and restaurateur that owns several Michelin-star establishments in the Big Apple. Bund 18, a couple of blocks north to the Three on the Bund, is a similar concept. In addition to two restaurants and two floors of luxury boutique shops, Bund 18 is well-known for its roof-top bar called Bar Rouge, featuring a huge balcony overlooking the Bund and Huangpu River.

The Yongfoo Elite

A somewhat mystic venue, the Yongfoo Elite is a quasi-membership restaurant housed in a 1930s mansion that was first occupied by the former British consul general in Shanghai. At 200 Yongfu Road, the Yongfoo Elite features a lush decoration in the restored house as well as in the two bars in the garden, which were built of beams, pillars and bricks gathered from other heritage buildings. Stocked in the two-level restaurant are unique curios from the private collection of the restaurant owner, whose other famous establishments include the Door and Xianqiangfang. In 2004, Wallpaper magazine voted the Yongfoo Elite the most beautifully styled club in the world.

Moganshan Road

It is estimated there are more than 1,000 art galleries in Shanghai. The biggest and most significant artist community could be found on Moganshan Road, a small street on the northern bank of the Suzhou Creek. An expansive warehouse complex at 50 Moganshan Road has been reconstructed into modern spaces, occupied by galleries and studios owned by scores of young artists from not only Shanghai but other provinces and countries, including the most famous avant-garde Chinese artists such as Ding Yi and Zhou Tiehai, whose art works have been hot properties on international art market.

Taikang Road

Converted from a cluster of factory workshops, warehouse and residential houses, this neighborhood located in the southern part of downtown is another SOHO for local and international artists, most of whom are in the designing industry. Visitors could find a variety of shops that feature products designed by young talented Chinese, ranging from clothes, accessories to jewelry and souvenirs.

An Incentive Shanghai - Case Study

Insurance Giant AIA's Incentive Trip to Shanghai

AIA, one of the largest life insurance companies in the world, has a strong presence in Southeast Asia. Every year, AIA organizes two to four incentive travel programs to award its outstanding employees and the programs have covered a large number of destinations around the world. In 2003, AIA set our sights on Shanghai. It organized an incentive travel tour for about 2,500 people in this chic and dynamic cosmopolitan city.

◆ During the event, conferences and the theme party were held in three large halls of the Shanghai New International Expo Center, covering a total area of 35,000 square meters. On the dinner party, colorful traditional Chinese performances such as Chinese operas and paper-cutting show strongly appealed to the audience. These programs provide a more comprehensive way for foreigners to learn about Chinese culture and tradition. Also, this event proved the city's strength in terms of its capacities of hosting MICE venues.

POLA's Trip of Beauty

Between February 7 and 12, 2006, The Japanese cosmetics company Pola held in the Shanghai International Convention Center a corporate meeting for the company's 2,000-some sales people from 11 countries and regions. All the participants arrived in Shanghai in two groups to have their six-day incentive travel.

◆ Pola's national corporate meeting began in 1952 and has been held for 55 years in row. Each year, participants are chosen from some 100,000 sales people in Japan and around the world, based on their performance. This incentive travel program is designed to award Pola's outstanding employees who have achieved outstanding sales records as well as expand its overseas presence.

◆ On this Pola's charming trip, all the participants travel by more than 20 flights operated by the airlines JAL, China Eastern and Shanghai Airlines. They stayed at seven five-star hotels, including Garden Hotel, Ritz-Carlton, JC Mandarin, Pudong Shangri-La. During the trip, 2,000 people were split into 60 small groups. They visited the traditional scenic spots in Shanghai, such as Yuyuan Garden and Shanghai Museum and also experienced the chic and modern side of the city by taking a ride on the Meglev train and walking around Xintiandi. Trips to Suzhou, and Hangzhou were arranged to add appeal to the itinerary of the incentive trip.

Events

The calendar of Shanghai is usually booked by all kinds of events all through the year, ranging from culture, arts, lifestyle to sports and entertainment. There are a broad variety-festival celebrations, art exhibitions, concerts, sport games and lectures. The following are a few of the biggest events that run regularly on the city's calendar of a year.

Formula One

Shanghai Tourism Festival

Since 2004, Shanghai has become a new stop for Formula One enthusiasts around the world. The Shanghai leg of the world top car race is the most spectacular and profitable sports game in the city of Shanghai. The race is held in September and October in the big-ticket Shanghai Circuit in the western outskirts, which can seat about 30,000.

The city's biggest travel event, Shanghai Tourism Festival is held in September and October every year. A variety of activities are organized for both tourists and local residents during the festival. Of them, the top highlights include the parade of floaters, featuring the characters of the culture from different countries they represent, going through the major streets of downtown Shanghai, and the International Musical Fireworks Festival, a spectacular display of eye-stunning fireworks, created by artists from all over the world.

Master Cup Tennis Tournament

Another world-class sports event held in Shanghai, Master Cup Tennis Tournament has drawn tens of thousands audience by breath-taking contests between world top ace players every year. It is usually held in November in the Asia's largest tennis stadium, located in the southwest outskirts of Shanghai.

New Year Bell Ringing at Longhua Temple

Launched in 1988, this ceremonial celebration has attracted a huge number of participants from several Southeast Asian countries where Buddhism is a major religion. The ceremony of ringing the 3,000-kilogram bronze bell to count down of the New Year is held in the Longhua Temple, the oldest Buddhist temple in Shanghai. There are also ritual performances and vegetarian fares prepared by the temple kitchen.

International Parachute Jumping Performances

Parachute jumping performance is a sport for the brave, particularly low-altitude parachute jumping. China hosted the first international high-rise parachute jumping in Shanghai in 2003, with 16 athletes from five countries - the US, Sweden, Norway, Mexico and the Netherlands. They jumped from the 345-metre-tall Jinmao Tower and performed solo jump, duo jump, triplet jump as well as a group jump of 16 people. The 2nd International Parachute Jumping Show was held in Shanghai in 2004, with a total of 37 performers, including six Chinese athletes. This show has become an international event of professional standard that has attracted a large number of audiences from both home and abroad. It has also ushered in what is known as the urban spectacular sports into Shanghai.

THEME PARTY

in hotel

The Finest Personal Service

On May 30 more than 300 employees moved into action for an outside catering event for Freescale Technology Forum at the Shanghai Exhibition Center. The 30,000 square foot main hall was filled to capacity with more than 1,500 of Freescale's customers and partners.

◆ As commended by Mr. Tim Doke, Vice President of Corporate Communication: "And, intensity was the order of the day for several hundred catering staff of The Portman Ritz-Carlton, which had the task of converting the general session hall into perhaps the largest dining room in China in exactly one hour immediately following the closing remarks. A small army of workers stacked and removed the 1,500 seats and rolled in four, 40-foot long double-sided catering lines, along with 100 standing cocktail tables and food to feed all the attendees a buffet lunch. The hotel enlisted 45 managers-including the hotel General Manager himself-to help in a beautifully orchestrated effort to convert the hall, stack 4,000 plates, 2,500 sets of silverware, 2,500 coffee cups and an array of Asian and western cuisine that was overseen by 80 servers and 75 chefs, who were constantly replenishing the food as it was consumed. Even 30 dish washers were on hand behind the scenes to keep up with the demands."

Meeting from a Brand New Perspective at JW Marriott Hotel Shanghai!

At the very centre of Shanghai stands the JW Marriott Hotel Shanghai, situated in Tomorrow Square, one of Shanghai's most futuristic and luxurious landmarks. Surrounded by open spaces, the green sprawl of People's Park and close to the city's cultural and entertainment hub of People's Square and Xintiandi, JW Marriott Hotel Shanghai offers a spectacular 360° panorama of the bustling city below.

◆ The spacious 600 sqm JW's Ballroom, with a uniquely located foyer and terrace overlooking Nanjing Road and the traditional Old Clock Tower, is extremely versatile and can accommodate 680 persons for standing reception or divide into 3 sections to accommodate smaller functions. The 175 sqm Junior Ballroom is also available for more intimate gatherings and parties.

◆ Slip back in time, appreciate the superb teas at a People's Park coffee break or at a decadent Shanghainese gala event on the 5th floor. Dream about the pleasure domes of Old Shanghai where the rich once lounged on opium beds indulging in their favourite pastime. Or enjoy the hustle and bustle of Shanghai Old Food Street in the 5th floor pre-function area of JW's Ballroom as you taste traditional Shanghainese street cuisine.

◆ The Shanghai 360 degree themed dinner is an excellent example of a formal gala dinner in JW's Ballroom. It features two renowned European winemakers "Navigating the Senses" of 128 guests through an exquisite selection of wines to match a six-course gastronomic menu. With compass in hand, guests wine, dine and dance the evening away amidst white chiffon, fuschia orchids and the heady aroma of cigars and cognac.

◆ Even the busiest meeting schedules need a few moments for reflection and to take in the flavours of Shanghai. With this in mind, JW Marriott hotel Shanghai has drawn inspiration from some of the irresistible sights and sounds of People's Park and recreated a range of delightful breaks for guests to take in the hotel. Whether it's a "Meeting with a View" or "Tai-Chi Break", pause and revitalise your energy with a unique Shanghai experience.

◆ JW Marriott Hotel Shanghai blends panoramic surroundings, an unrivalled range of facilities and services, versatile function and meeting rooms and the choice of the most comprehensive packages to fit every occasion. Even the attention to the way a meal is prepared on site, makes the all important difference as to whether the plated service arrives 'fresh out of the kitchen'.

◆ Whether it is elegance or showbiz pizzazz, a party cruise down the Huangpu River or a stately dinner at the Yu Garden, The Westin Bund Center Shanghai is known for turning every event into a memorable experience.

Shanghai 1930 Theme Party

Shanghai in the 1930's is recognized as the city's golden era. This golden era reflected the desire to catch up with the world and live in a world with a modern spirit. Today, this wish is being turned into reality with impressive speed & Shanghai is now a vibrant cosmopolitan metropolis.

◆ The legend of Shanghai in the 1930s rests in the memory of the older generation and in the imagination of the young. Music, records, calendar posters, silent black and white films were the symbols of the good old days. People are ever curious and strive to recall and relive those times.

◆ Imagine a unique experience from those bygone days. Where everyone is elegantly dressed. The men are wearing stylish silk hats, suspenders, suits, and ties. The women are wearing elegant Qipaos, gloves and high heels. Everyone socializes in an elegant place with old style rickshaws, fine Shanghainese food, and very very good music.

Accor Opening Ceremony

When Accor group was launching 4 new hotels in Xi'an, Xiamen, Suzhou and Dongguan, Sofitel Jin Jiang organized an opening party to celebrate this important occasion. The party took place in the hotel's Golden Ballroom. The 600 square meters ballroom was divided into two sections, one for dinner, the other cocktail. The cocktail area features 4 distinctive show rooms with local themes. Such as Xi'an's terra cotta, Suzhou's traditional garden, Xiamen's tea show etc. Guests were all impressed by the perfect combination of the traditional Chinese elements and natural scenery. Staff dressed up with terra cotta costume became another spotlight of the event.

- ◆ The dinner set up created a real awe-inspiring effect: all tables were lit up with a lamp underneath to illuminate a sofitel logo at the bottom of the plate.

White Party

In conjunction with the grand opening of the top-revolving lounge X46, Sofitel Jin Jiang introduced the first White Party to Shanghai. Dressed up in white from hotel staff and customers, the event created an exciting dreamland atmosphere, a French style white world with live entertainment in 360 degrees at 180 meters / 594 feet above the ground!

TOP-CLASS venues

TOP-CLASS venues

The total space of up-market exhibition and conferences in Shanghai has reached 250,000 square meters, of which about 80 percent in Pudong. They include five large-scale venues with exhibition space exceeding 10,000 square meters. According to specialists in the MICE industry, both the exhibition space and exhibitions held in Shanghai have outnumbered Beijing, China's capital city and another major MICE destination in the country.

◆ Most conference space in the city breaks down into the Shanghai International Convention Center, the city's No.1 conference venue, and top star-rated hotels. Meanwhile, there are 25 five-star, 40 four-star and 125 three-star hotels in Shanghai, the majority of which have multifunctional meeting rooms. More than 50 per cent of the city's five- and four-star properties were built after 1996.

◆ Although, Puxi, part of the city to the west of the Huangpu River, out-numbers Pudong in terms of the number of high-end hotels (six per cent of the city's five-star hotels and 30 per cent of the four-star in Pudong) and exhibition venues, the facilities in Pudong is newer and bigger in terms of individual space. Currently, exhibitions that require at least 30,000 square meters of space are all moving to the venue in Pudong, the Shanghai New International Expo Center. Still under expansion, the Shanghai New International Expo Center claimed about one third of the exhibitions held in Shanghai in the 2003-2005 period. Most of these exhibitions were large international and trade shows.

History of Shanghai

Shanghai was a small fishing village for ages before the second Opium War in 1842. Built on an underdeveloped marshland, it has a population of only about 50,000. Its economy was sustained by cotton production, fishing and trade in silk and tea. The Treaty of Nanjing, signed between the government of the Qing Dynasty and the British government after the War, forced the city to open as a trading port to overseas traders and investors. In the mid- and late 19th century, a huge number of Westerners flocked to Shanghai. They set up their banks and trading companies, built factories, and settled down with their families. A booming economy drew more people from all over the world. It was also where the rich and powerful in China met. This bustling town, therefore, won the reputation as the "Paris of the Orient".

◆ After the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949, Shanghai was developed into a powerhouse of China's heavy industry and commercial center. It contributed a lion's share of the national revenues to the central government. The economic reform and opening policy in the early 1980s, and particularly the announcement of developing Pudong, a huge expanse of rural land on the east bank of the Huangpu River, in 1990 put Shanghai on the fast track of growth.

◆ Pudong was turned from farmlands to a prosperous new Shanghai, where glossy office towers, grand hotels, a US $ 2-billion airport, immense factories of multinational companies, towering apartments and luxurious villas define a new cityscape. Those who come to visit Shanghai always marvel at the city's drastic changes and dynamic spirit. While the local government is pouring more money to improve the city's infrastructure before it hosts the World Expo in 2010, Shanghai, a land of opportunities.

Climate in Shanghai

Located on the central east coast-line Shanghai features a comparatively mild climate. The best time to visit Shanghai is from late March to early June in spring or from mid-September to late November in autumn. Summer and winter are long. The hottest days are usually in July and August, when temperature may go up to 38 degrees Celsius. The coldest time often comes in around February, with the mercury dropping below freezing. Humidity makes a Shanghai winter uncomfortably damp, particularly when it rains in winter. Though there is no central heating system in Shanghai, air-conditioning is available in hotels, department stores, restaurants and bars, and other public venues. The city has moderate rainfall, most of which is between May and September. The plum rain season that may last about two to three weeks from late June to early July, so it is recommended that avoid outdoor activities in that period. Typhoons occasionally hit Shanghai.

Shanghai's Location

The name of Shanghai, literally meaning “on the sea”, comes from its geo-graphic position. A port city in the middle of China's eastern coastal line, Shanghai is situated at the confluence of the Huangpu River and the Yangtze River, China's longest waterway that flows into the East China Sea. And the city rests on the Yangtze

Delta plain. The city is bordered by two provinces, Jiangsu in the north and Zhejiang in the south. Shanghai municipality covers more than 6300 square kilometers. It includes the city of Shanghai (Puxi, the downtown part on the west bank of the Huangpu River, plus Pudong) and a couple of satellite towns surrounding the city.

Shanghainese and New Shanghainese

A melting pot, Shanghai has a population of 17 million, including 13.6 million permanent residents. You will find a very few of them were originally from Shanghai. The majority of local Chinese are the offspring of people who came to Shanghai seeking business or job opportunities from almost all over the country in the past century.

◆ The opening of the city in the 1990s resulted in the huge influx of people from around the country, foreigners and overseas Chinese from Taiwan and Hong Kong. The number of people coming from out of Shanghai has totaled 6.9 million. The latest official statistics show that in 2005, about 46,000 foreigners and some 18,000 people from Hong Kong, Macao and Taiwan were working in Shanghai. A new term "New Shanghainese" has been coined to refer to the city's new population that has settled down in Shanghai, pursue their dreams of success and wealth and fit in themselves into the local society and culture.

Shanghai's Environment

An industrial powerhouse for China's economy, Shanghai was once besieged by heavy pollutions. In hopes to achieve a sustainable economy and further attract overseas investors, the city government launched in the late 1990s a US$6-billion, 15-year-long program to clean up Shanghai, which includes relocating factories to the outskirts of the city, planting greenbelts in the central downtown, cleansing the river water, building up more sewage plants and adopting a strict car emission standard.

- ◆ In 2005, the city government invested 28.1 billion yuan or three percent of the city's GDP, in environmental projects. About two billion yuan was spent to further clean up the waterways. The green belt coverage in downtown area had reached to 37 percent of the total area by the end of 2005, increasing the green land per capita to 11 square meters.

Culture and Lifestyle in Shanghai

The largest cosmopolitan city on Chinese mainland, Shanghai has a very open society, which has nurtured a culture that tends to incorporate diverse elements from other societies and cultures. Shanghai's culture is known for its "Hai-style culture" for decades. Elements of Western influence blend well into Chinese tradition, which could be detected from the city's sophisticated culture and the modern lifestyle of local people. However, the clashes of ideas of different cultures are inevitable, particularly among the younger generation.

◆ The city has reported a very low fertility rate for years. The majority of the local families stick to the one-child policy. Meanwhile, a certain number of young couples prefer not to have children. With the size of a family getting smaller and the residence getting bigger, it is very rare to see three generations living under one roof. The city government has built a lot of nursing homes to take care of the senior citizens, a welfare service to solve the city's aging problem.

◆ Thanks to the city's strong economy, its all-inclusive culture and its long-time exposure to Western influence, Shanghai natives have been cultivating a modern lifestyle that features cosmopolitan characters. The characters are evident in the sophisticated way how Shanghai's dress, the neon lights that illustrate the bustling shopping streets, the tantalizing Shanghai cuisine, and many other little details.

Architecture in Shanghai

In the mid- and late 19th century, a huge number of Westerners flocked to Shanghai. They set up their businesses and settled down with their families. The foreigners mainly congregated in several certain areas of the city, called "concessions", where local Chinese people had restricted access. The concession period in the history of Shanghai left behind a rich heritage of Western-style buildings. They are pearls of the cityscape today. The pearl of the pearls is the Bund, a 1.5-kilometer-long strip on the west bank of the Huangpu River, on which a dozen of grandiose edifices, established as the office buildings of foreign companies, apartments, hotels and clubhouses, feature a wide variety of styles.

◆ In the former French concessions, a large number of old villa houses have been well preserved. Taking a stroll along Fuxing Road in the southwest downtown, you would enjoy those time-honored houses behind lush plane trees or nestled in quite alleys. Xintiandi, a huge commercial and entertainment complex, is an effort to revive the characteristic residential style known as Shikumen, houses with stone-framed gate that were popular in the 1930s. It also set up an example to the city planners on how to restore the old architecture for commercial purposes.

◆ On the other side, modern and chic new buildings have been mushrooming in Shanghai. The breath-taking skyline of Lujiazui, the city's financial district in Pudong, is the epitome of how the city is moving on a fast track to one of the most glamorous cities in the world. Jin Mao Tower, stands in Lujiazui and a taller one is currently under construction next to it. World famous architects are vying to showcase their talents in Shanghai. Examples are the Shanghai Grand Theatre, designed by French architect Jean-Marie Charpentier, and the Pudong International Airport, designed by another famous French architect Paul Andreu (who also designed the National Theatre in Beijing).

■ GETTING TO and getting around

■ GETTING TO and getting around

A gateway into the vast China, Shanghai holds a strategic position that has immediate influence on its economy and culture. With the city becoming the first stop of more and more overseas visitors on their China trips, the number of foreign airlines with direct flights to Shanghai has been growing. The only city in China that has two airports, Shanghai has been upgrading and expanding its civil aviation facilities. In addition, the further opening of the flying rights will bring larger flows of passengers, cargo and capital, giving a boost to Shanghai's goal of becoming an aviation hub in Asia Pacific by 2010. And from Shanghai, you may travel to any other destination in China by planes, trains, ships, buses or cars. The city is only an hour and a half by air from Beijing, the capital city, and two hours from Hong Kong, a long-standing aviation hub in Asia Pacific.

One City, Two Airports

Shanghai is the only city in China that has two international airports. The old and smaller Hongqiao International Airport, about 13 kilometers west to the central downtown of Shanghai, is for domestic flights only, while the new and much bigger Pudong International Airport, near the eastern coast of Shanghai and about 30 kilometers from downtown, is for both domestic and international flights. Codes on flight tickets indicate the destinations: PVG for Pudong and SHA for Hongqiao. If you travel between the two airports, it usually takes about 40 minutes by car and about an hour by bus.

◆ Pudong International Airport, which cost 32.9 billion yuan for the first and second phase, will eventually have four runways and be able to handle 80 million passengers and five million tons of cargos annually. Two runways are in operation today and are able to host the largest passenger planes in the world. A third run-way will be completed for cargo planes in 2008.

◆ Choices of public transit at both airports are multiple. Airport shuttle buses are in operation in both airports and covering different routes, they can bring you to the major spots in downtown Shanghai, while most big hotels provide their own shuttle bus services at both airports. The most flexible public transit is certainly taxi. Both airports have taxi terminals where passengers can queue up for a ride. Pudong International Airport is about 50 minutes to an hour by taxi from downtown. The taxi fee is around 160 yuan in the daytime if there is no serious traffic jam on the way.

◆ The terminal of the maglev train, the world's fastest train, is only within the walking distance of Pudong International Airport. The train brings you to the central part of Pudong, where you can transfer to either taxi or metro, of which the station is only a couple of minutes by walk.

A Busier Sky

By mid-2006, 48 international and domestic airlines had started operation at Pudong International Airport, providing flights that link 73 overseas cities and 62 cities on Chinese mainland. More international airlines are negotiating with Chinese aviation authorities to launch direct flights to Shanghai. The volume of flights the Pudong airport handles accounts for about 60 per cent of total in Shanghai. The rest, all domestic flights, are handled by Hongqiao.

◆ Every year, about one million passengers enter Shanghai by taking flights from Hong Kong, an established aviation hub in Asia Pacific. And another six million from other Asian airports stop over in Shanghai to transfer other flights. At the moment, China

Eastern and Dragonair operate about 30 passenger flights every day in Shanghai.

◆ To further open its sky is a significant step that Shanghai has vowed to take on its way to a major aviation hub in Asia Pacific. Granted the fifth freedom rights (meaning a foreign air carrier is allowed to pick up passengers and cargo on the Chinese mainland en route to other destinations), the city's international airport will witness a large flow of passengers and cargos. And certainly, more cash. A city government official estimated that every one million passengers could generate economic benefits worth RMB1 billion and create 2,500 jobs for the area. Having seen these business potentials, UPS, one of the world's leaders in express shipping, is building its international transfer center in Shanghai.

◆ More and more business travelers are arriving in Shanghai by charter flights, including CEOs of global 500 companies and the emerging ultra-rich Chinese entrepreneurs. The city is expanding its facilities to catch up this new trend of business travel. In 2002, China's first terminal exclusive for commercial flight passengers was completed in Shanghai Hongqiao Airport. The two-level building, worth more than one million yuan investment, is operated by Shanghai Airlines. Industrial analysts estimate that in the next decade, China will need about 600 to 1,200 commercial flights to cater to the growing demands of high-end business travelers.

Getting Around by Four-Wheelers

In this cosmopolitan city, cars are usually the No.1 choice to get around, for either business or leisure, with efficiency and convenience combined. Though the risk to be caught in a traffic jam has to be taken into account, riding in a rented car or a taxi is, in most cases, enjoyable. The bonus of a car ride, particularly to those new comers, is to feel the pulse of the most dynamic and most-rapidly changing city in the world by a close encounter with the city and its people.

◆ Car rental service is getting more and more popular in Shanghai but to rent a car and steer the wheels requires a valid driving license issued by Chinese authorities and even a valid residential permit issued by local government. But only a passport is required if you rent a car with a Chinese driver (who speaks English!). The other advantage to be chauffeured around is that you stay away from the challenges of maze-like streets in Shanghai and sit back enjoying the mesmerizing cityscape.

◆ Two international-brand car rental companies operating in Shanghai are Hertz China and Anji. Hertz is the first international car rental company that has set up service in China while Angel Car Rental & Leasing Co Ltd is the first such joint venture between the city's biggest auto supplier and Dutch company AVIS. The car models available for rental range from the normal Santana 2000 and Beijing Jeep to Audi A6 and Red Flag, a limo that was exclusive for the privileged top government officials before 1980s.

◆ Another major car rental service provider in town is Shanghai Bashi & Airport Bus Vehicle Rental Co Ltd, a joint venture between Shanghai Bashi Industrial (Group) Co Ltd, the city's largest State-owned public transit operator, and Shanghai Airport Bus Co Ltd. The company can provide vehicle rental service, charter service and airport pickup service to both individuals and corporate customers. It has rental shops at both Pudong and Hongqiao airports.

◆ Shanghai is where you can find the cleanest taxis with best service on Chinese mainland. Taxi is reasonably cheap and hassle-free. About 450,000 taxis are clean and moderately spacious. Taxi drivers are polite. Though a quite number of taxi drivers speak English, it is still recommended that you bring an address card of your destination written in Chinese characters to make sure your taxi driver gets the right direction. Taxi service monitoring authorities would impose hard punishment on drivers who cheat customers.

◆ In mid-2006, the city government raised the taxi fare under the pressure of rising oil price. The flag fall for a taxi ride is 11 yuan, one yuan higher than the previous price, for the first three kilometers and 2.1 yuan per kilometer after (it was two yuan per kilometer before). Between 11pm and 5am, the flag fall and the rate per kilometer after flag fall are both 30 per cent higher than the day-time fare. At night, you can tell if a taxi is empty by the red "for hire" sign on the dashboard of the passenger side.

◆ Always remember to get your taxi receipt before getting off. You will find it extremely helpful if you leave anything valuable behind on taxi. You could track down your personal items through the telephone number of the taxi company and the driver's business license number on the printed receipt.

◆ Dazhong and Qiangsheng are the two biggest taxi operators in Shanghai. Not only they have the largest fleets of taxis in town, but also their services are voted the top standard by customers. Their taxis are easily recognizable by their logo colors: turquoise for Dazhong and orange yellow for Qiangsheng. A few Red Flag limousines and a few Benz are available as taxi in Shanghai and they charge the same fares as the others.

◆ Traffic regulations are harsh in Shanghai. Taxis will never pull off if you hail them standing at any crossroad. And taxis are extremely difficult to get on a rainy Friday evening, where traffic jam could be getting quite serious on most downtown streets. In that case, you either make a reservation one day in advance or try the city's other public transit choices, which could also prove efficient and reliable.

Other Public Transit Choices

Metro

Since its first train went on track in 1995, the city's metro operator has launched five lines that run through major parts of the downtown area in Shanghai. Thanks to advanced technology imported from Germany and France, and a colossal investment of the city government, the metro system is efficient, comfortable and clean. It is the top choice of public transit for those time-savvy urbanites. Traveling by metro makes sure that your time is well under control, when being stuck in the traffic jam, a normal scene during the rush hours on streets, highways and across-the-river tunnels and bridges, usually causes embarrassment of being late for work and appointments, business or personal. No.2 Metro Line is much preferred by those who commute between the two sides of the Huangpu River. It goes through the central downtown in Puxi and Lujiazui, the bustling business and commercial district in Pudong. However, metro could be crowded during the rush hours on weekdays and in the daytime on weekends.

- ◆ Shanghai's metro is not running around the clock yet (for detailed running hours, please check the Metro schedule). Metro fare ranges between three yuan (equivalent to 37 US cents) and eight yuan, depending on how many stops you ride through.

◆ The city government is building new metro lines and extending the existing ones, part of its huge plan to establish a metro web that crisscross the densely-populated city, like other metropolitan cities like Paris, Hong Kong, Tokyo and New York. Six more line will be added by 2010, when the city hosts the World Expo. The target is that any metro station will be within a walking distance of some 600 meters to about 75 percent of downtown residents.

MagLev

The big-ticket maglev (magnetic levitation) in Shanghai is the first commercial maglev line in the world. Though only covering 33 kilometers long, the 8.9-billion-yuan train is truly an epitome of the speed how Shanghai has been developing. The trip between its one terminal at Pudong International Airport and the other at Longyang Road takes only eight minutes. It is said its maximum speed can reach 430 kilometers per hour. A one-way ticket costs 50 yuan and a return ticket 80 yuan. For VIP cabin, a one-way ticket is 100 yuan and a return ticket 160 yuan. The ultra-high speed train operates between 8:30am and 5:30pm and it runs every 20 minutes. Its terminal at Longyang Road is within a walking distance of the Metro Line No.2. It might not be a perfect choice of public transit for those cost-and time-conscious travelers, but for the ones who yearn to experience the edge of modern technology, its attraction is irresistible.

City Bus

Bus is the most popular vehicle for average Shanghai, partly because it is the cheapest of all public transit - basically one or one and a half yuan per head per ride for normal buses and two yuan for air-conditioned ones. Few bus drivers or conductors speak English, but most vehicles are equipped with audio systems that broadcast the names of each stop in English.

Getting out of Shanghai

Train

With the completion of a new railway station in the southwest of Shanghai, the city has upgraded its train transportation to a higher level. Shanghai South Railway Station, the world's first and largest domed railway station, opened for operation in June. It has a total of 14 waiting lounges that seat about 6,000 people. Besides double-deck trains to Hangzhou, a popular tourist destination, trains departing at the South Railway Station are also bound for such major cities as Beijing, Guiyang, Nanjing, Jilin, Chongqing, Changsha, Guangzhou and Chengdu. The station now handles one third of the city's overall rail traffic volume. A huge public transit hub sits right below the modern railway station, offering travelers immediate accesses to two city's metro lines, taxi terminals, city buses and long-distance buses.

◆ Shanghai Railway Station, in the north of downtown Shanghai, is still a major railway traffic hub. It is located in a commercial district known as the Everbright City, which features a medley of retail shops, restaurants and hotels. About 40 bus terminals could be found on the northern and southern squares of the Shanghai Railway Station. The Metro No.1 Line is within the walking distance to it.

◆ A major advantage of traveling by train is that such a journey could open one's eyes to the countryside life of inland China, something you can hardly expect from flying from one city to another in one or two hours. Trains are getting more comfortable in China. Cabins are clean and air-conditioned. Make sure that comfort is guaranteed, buying soft seats for a short trip and soft sleepers for a longer one. The other two categories of tickets are hard seats and hard sleepers, which are less expensive.

◆ For long-distance travel, trains to Beijing and Hong Kong are usually regarded as a more leisure options. A soft sleeper ticket for an overnight train from Shanghai to Beijing costs only half a flight ticket, a little less than 500 yuan. The trip from Shanghai to Kowloon of Hong Kong via Guangzhou by train takes about 24 hours. It costs a little more than 1,100 yuan for a deluxe soft sleeper (a two-berth cabin) and 900 yuan or less for a normal soft sleeper.

◆ Beijing has approved the construction of another major railway lines linking Shanghai with the capital city and Hangzhou. Trains are expected to run 300 kilometers per hour on the 1,320-km Shanghai-Beijing ultra-speed railway, cutting the travel time between the two cities by more than half. The maglev train between Shanghai and Hangzhou is a 35-billion-yuan project that will kick off at the end of 2006 and is scheduled of completion in 2009 before the World Expo in Shanghai. The 150-km maglev line will have four stops only, two in Shanghai (including one at the Expo site) and two in Zhejiang Province. It will take only 27 minutes for people to travel between the two cities by maglev train, which runs at 450 kilometers per hour. Currently, the minimum travel time by the fastest train is about two hours.

Boat

A port city at where the Yangtze River flows into the East China Sea, Shanghai today sees cruise boats sail thousands of miles to Shanghai from countries like Japan and the US, while several deluxe passenger liners bring travelers from Shanghai to popular leisure destinations in Southeast Asia, such as Singapore and Malaysia. Domestic liners reach big coastal cities like Ningbo and Nantong as well as major cities along the Yangtze River, including Chongqing, Wuhan and Nanjing. Traveling by boat up to the Yangtze River could be a trip of real pleasure, particularly the Three Gorges and the gargantuan Three Gorges Dam.

◆ All the international ocean liners dock at the Shanghai Port International Passenger Shipping Center, which opened to operation in July, 2006. With the demolition of the 140-year-old Shiliupu Wharf at the southern end of the Bund, all the domestic liners have been moved to the Wusong Passenger Shipping Center in the northern Baoshan District, near the estuary of the Huangpu River into the Yangtze River.

A CITY OF trend setters

A CITY OF trend setters

The city of Shanghai has long been known for its unique culture that tends to keep on absorbing elements from other cultures and societies. Shanghai people are always open minded. They like to catch up with the newest things in the world. They are fashion savvy and they are trend setters. They have sophisticated tastes and lead a chic lifestyle. This particular character of Shanghai people and their culture are evident in the ever changing fashions of every season, in the stylish shops, in the classy restaurants and in the most "in" night clubs or bars.

Hottest Tables

Shanghai is the culinary capital in China and is rising as a hot dining and wining hub in Asia. A medley of various cuisines, from both China and abroad, has enriched the city's dining scenes. The differences of flavors from one cuisine to another could be delightfully shocking. And every meal would leave a mesmerizing recollection on your memory. The hottest tables in Shanghai are:

Chinese Restaurants

Gongdelin Vegetarian

Established in 1922, Gongdelin is the most famous vegetarian restaurant in Shanghai. A recent renovation added a contemporary touch to its traditional interior decor. # Cultural Venues

Museums

It is through museums that you will learn the history and civilization. The history of Shanghai is also to be traced in several museums in the city. Sitting on the People's Square in central downtown are Shanghai Museum and Shanghai Urban Planning Exhibition Center. Shanghai Museum showcases the best collection of antique objects the city could offer, ranging from bronze, ceramics, statues to furniture and costumes. Shanghai Urban Planning Exhibition Center, next to the City Hall, is where all the achievements and progresses that the city government has made in turning Shanghai into a world-class cosmopolitan.

◆ There are two museums in Pudong you should not miss, both in Lujiazui, the financial district by the Huangpu

River. Shanghai History Museum, located in the Oriental Pearl TV Tower, is where you could learn the history of Shanghai since the mid-1800s, while Lujiazui Development Showroom, housed in a heritage house built in the 1910s, traces the history of how Pudong has been magically turned from farmlands to a new modern city.

Art Scene

The art scene in Shanghai is vibrant, with hundreds of galleries spreading all over the city. Shanghai Art Museum near the People's Square is where the major art exhibitions and events are held. The most noteworthy show is the Shanghai Biennale, an international art exhibition that runs every two years to display the artworks by significant contemporary artists from both home and abroad.

◆ The largest art community could be found on Moganshan Road, a small street on the northern bank of the Suzhou Creek in central downtown. Galleries and studios of scores of young artists, mainly Chinese and a few foreigners, occupy several warehouses at 50 Moganshan Road.

Among those artists, you may find several famous names that have won international recognitions. Another art street is Duolun Road, in the northeast Hongkou District. On this street lined up by restored old buildings, you may find a contemporary art museum, a dozen of art and curio shops, and an antique market.

◆ Jinshan peasant painting is an appealing original art you can not miss in Shanghai. Jinshan is a rural town on the southern outskirt of Shanghai. Since its debut on a national art exhibition in Beijing in 1980, paintings created by amateur farmers from Jinshan have won high praises from art critics and global reputation for their rich colors, natural brushes and pastoral motifs.

Sightseeing Spots

What Shanghai, as a tourist destination, offers are mainly cultural and historical landmarks. These masterpieces by architects, designers and city planners from different ages that span for more than a century have contributed to a spectacular cityscape in China's largest and most dynamic cosmopolitan city.

The Bund

A synonym of Shanghai for more than a century, the Bund is a 1.5-kilometer-long riverside strip with the Huangpu River on one side and 50-some grandiose buildings on the other, featuring a broad variety of architectural styles that range from Gothic, Roman to Baroque and a mix of Chinese and Western. These heritage buildings include Dongfeng Hotel (the former Shanghai Club), the Bund 12 (the former HSBC building, known for its grand dome), Peace Hotel (featuring a green pyramid atop), the Custom House (with the city's "Big Ben"), the Bank of China building and the Shanghai Mansion (known as Broadway Mansion before). When all these buildings are illuminated by flash light at night, they present a breathtaking postcard view that makes Shanghai famous. Their facades shine with an enchanting charm one will never forget. This evening spectacle makes a cruise trip on the Huangpu River or a stroll along the Riverside Promenade on Pudong side more enjoyable. A new round of development has been upgrading the riverside strip to a high-end entertainment and lifestyle zone, by leasing the historical buildings to luxury brands and fine-dining restaurants. Three on the Bund and the Bund 18 are the first such complexes.

Xintiandi

A huge lifestyle complex of boutique shops, restaurants and bars, Xintiandi is one of the hottest sightseeing spots in Shanghai today. Located in central downtown, it is only two blocks to the south of Huaihai Road. This spreading complex of restaurants, bars and lifestyle shops was developed from the clusters of old neighborhoods. The northern section feature the time-honored shikumen houses while the southern section highlights modern architecture. When you walk into the alleys paved by slab stones, get lost between the walls of grey and red bricks, and passed by pitch-black wooden doors bedecked by Baroque-style carvings on top, you feel like time goes back to the Shanghai in 1930s. But as soon as you walk in, you will be in a different world-modern, chic, spacious and artistic, no matter it is a restaurant, a pub or an accessory store. History and fashion is perfectly blended into each other at Xintiandi. And it is in Xintiandi that you feel the unique culture of Shanghai.

Lujiazui

Pudong has created a new exciting skyline that appeals to visitors to Shanghai. The most noteworthy landmarks in Lujiazui, the city's financial district located on the eastern bank of the Huangpu River, are the Oriental Pearl TV Tower and Jin Mao Tower. The 468-meter-tall Oriental Pearl TV Tower consists of several globular structures. Sitting in the revolving restaurant on the height of 267 meters, you will enjoy a spectacular bird's-eye view over the Huangpu River, the downtown Shanghai and the booming Pudong. In the evening, take a ride in one of the tower's sightseeing elevators that bring you to the height of 350 meters, you would marvel at the city illuminated by alluring lights through the glass wall of the elevator and feel the pulse of a sleepless Shanghai.

- ◆ In the post-modern 420.5-meter-tall Jin Mao Tower, there is a sightseeing level on the 88th floor, at the height of 340.1 meters. Sightseeing elevators can bring visitors up to the 88th floor at the speed of 9.1 meter per second. This rare spectacle of the panorama over the city can hardly be sought anywhere else.

The City God Temple Area

The City God Temple area is what you should not miss on your tour in Shanghai. The temple, which the City God was enshrined, was first built in the Ming Dynasty and restored in 1926. Since a new City God Temple was built after the Sino-Japanese War in Shanghai, the first one has been known as the Old City God Temple. Around the Old City God Temple is clusters of traditional-looking buildings that date back to the end of the Qing Dynasty. These buildings feature flying eaves and carved beams. Passages between these buildings are usually narrow. In these buildings are a wide variety of retail shops, restaurants and tea houses.

- ◆ Authentic local snacks could be found in several famous restaurants and snack shops in the area-specialty snacks at Lu Bo Lang, vegetable buns as Song Yue Lou, pigeon egg dumplings, at Gui Hua Ting, eight-treasure steamed sweet rice at Song Yue Lou and steamed dumplings at Nanxiang Xiaolong. Acrobatics and other folk art performances could give you an entertaining moment after your shopping day. Or, just rest your legs in the century-old tea house in the center of the lake beside the Yuyuan Garden, sipping a cup of nice green tea and enjoying a charming view outside the window.

Shopping Paradise

Shopping is the biggest attraction to visitors to Shanghai. The city offers a broad spectrum of commodities, from expensive top luxury brands in the world to locally-made good with rich Chinese characters at bargain prices. Anything you need, you just name it. The image of Shanghai as a heaven for shoppers has been getting glossier since the 1980s. Swanky shopping malls, department stores and boutique shops open one after another, while the local bazaars never lose their luster. Shanghai is where you shop till you drop. The three major shopping areas are:

Nanjing Road

The glory of Nanjing Road as China's No.1 Shopping Street can date back to the 1960s. The No.1 Department Store, then the largest department store in the country, drew in tens of thousand people everyday. On weekends, Nanjing Road E. was fully packed by people from all over the country. Today, when the east end of Nanjing Road still appeals to the mass market, with about 1.5 million visitors everyday, the west end of the street is catching up with a strong sense of luxury. Of the several high-end office-and-commercial complexes that have been built near Shanghai Center, the most noteworthy one is Plaza 66. Its first floor space is all the international luxury brands would fight for. So far, it has leased to a number of luxury brands including LV, Prada, Cartier, Hermes and Dior. On the next two blocks stand two other shopping malls, CITIC and WestGate. Sogo, another international shopping mall brand, recently joined the force on the western section of Nanjing Road. In the prime commercial location at Jing'an Temple area, Sogo boasts such new world famous brands as Tiffany and Thomas Pink. Meanwhile, more boutique shops are to be opened at Shanghai Center, a complex of hotel, office building, service apartment and retails.

Huaihai Road

What you see today on Huaihai Road is what you would find on Nanjing Road in the 1970s and 1980s: the street is so jam packed by people that you have to push a way through the crowds if you are in a hurry. The bustling shopping strip starts from Xiangyang Road, where the famous Xiangyang Market was, in the west to Xizang Road in the east. The street has teamed up with a group of posh shopping malls (such as Times Square and Hong Kong Plaza), up-market department stores (such as Parkson, New World Printemps and Tai Ping Yang) and many boutique retail outlets that sell things from clothing, jewelry, sports-wear to watches, spectacles and cigar. There are two side streets off Huaihai Road that appeal in particular to many shoppers. They are Shaanxi Road and Maoming Road, just one block away from each other. Lining up these two streets are small independent shops run by locals. You will surprisingly find clothes and jewelry designed young talented Chinese. Some shops are specialized retailer of traditional Chinese garment. You can even have your cheongsam tailor-made in some of those shops.

Xujiahui

Xujiahui, located in the southwest of downtown Shanghai, is another major shopping area in Shanghai. It is dominated by several leading retail brands, such as Grand Gateway, Oriental Shopping Center, Pacific Department Store and Metro City, which target at customers on various levels. Buynow and Pacific Digital Plaza are the two largest shopping malls for digital products, ranging from laptop computers, MP3 players to digital cameras and mobile phones. In some huge complexes, you will not only find retail stores, but also a variety of restaurants, cinemas, discos and gyms. In a stone's away from the shopping area is a huge public park beautifully landscaped with blooming flowers and leafy trees. It provides a refreshing paradise for the shoppers to rest their legs.

Shanghai Brands

Looking for souvenirs? There are no better ones than the things branded with unique Shanghai characters. Here are a couple of well-known Shanghai brands that are perfect gift choices.

Shikumen

Rice wines were originally brewed in Shaoxing, a centuries-old water town in the northern Zhejiang Province. It is the most popular alcoholic drink on dinner table in the Yangtze Delta region, thanks to its mellow, sweetish flavor that goes perfectly with Shanghai cuisine. One of the most famous rice wine brands available in Shanghai is called Shikumen (which refers to the traditional residence with stone-framed gate in Shanghai). There are two choices: the Black Label and the Red Label. The Black Label is an older vintage and more expensive.

Silk King

This is a brand owned by Shanghai Silk Commercial Building Co Ltd, the city's top silk retailer that has opened several outlets in downtown Shanghai. For decades, it tailor-made silk apparels for senior government officials in China as well as such visiting foreign dignitaries as the former US president Bill Clinton. Silk King not only offers silk of premium quality, but also boasts top-class veteran tailors.

Xing Hua Lou

Xing Hua Lou, a Cantonese restaurant on Fuzhou Road, dates back to the mid-19th century. A phenomenon for a couple of weeks before the traditional Mid-Autumn Festival every year is long lines of people queuing outside the restaurant for hours for a case of Xing Hua Lou-brand moon cakes, the seasonal snack for the celebration of the festival. Cantonese-style moon cakes could have extraordinarily sweet stuffing, ranging from red bean paste to lotus paste, but still very enjoyable if one cake is shared by a couple of friends and accompanied by a cup of aromatic green tea.

Wang Xing Ji

Wang Xing Ji is a fan brand originated in Hangzhou, the lake resort in Zhejiang Province, which is only two hours of car ride south of Shanghai. Folded fans are no longer a necessity for people to carry around in summer time. Many women take beautifully-made fans as their fashion accessories. Wang Xing Ji offers a broad selection of fans made of different fabrics and featuring patterns of fascinating Chinese characters, such as calligraphy, ink painting and embroidery.

ALL THE SERVICES we provide

Thanks to its well developed service industry, Shanghai is acclaimed as the most convenient city, living-wise, on Chinese mainland. Most sectors provide services that are up to the international standard. You will find the city is easy and comfortable to get around. The following are the major services available to you in Shanghai.

Banking

By the end of March, 2006, the number of business organizations invested by foreign banks in Shanghai had reached 87, including one monetary brokerage company and two auto financing companies. Four foreign banks have their China operation headquarters in Shanghai. Currently, four foreign banks are planning to launch their branches in Shanghai and five others sub-branches. In 2005, People's Bank of China, China's central bank, opened its second headquarters in Shanghai, an effort to consolidate the city's status as China's financial center. All the four banking giants - Bank of China, Industrial and Commercial Bank of China, China Construction Bank and Agricultural Bank of China - have strong presence in Shanghai.

◆ Renmibi (RMB) is the sole legal currency in China. The basic currency unit is yuan, known popularly as "kuai" in colloquial language. One yuan equals 10 jiao or 100 fen. There are eight paper notes in broad circulation: 100 yuan, 50 yuan, 20 yuan, 10 yuan, five yuan, two yuan and one yuan. The largest RMB coin in circulation is one yuan. Coins of 0.5 yuan (five jiao) and 0.1 yuan (one jiao) are still in broad circulation. Rarely seen today are the coins of one fen, two fen and five fen.

◆ Foreign currency and travelers checks can be exchanged at Bank of China branches and money exchange counters at the Pudong International Airport and major hotels in town. The exchange rates between RMB and other major currencies, which are uniform in China, are posted by the banks and the money exchange counters. You can also check the business section on two English newspapers, Shanghai Daily and China Daily. Warnings: Do not change money with any stranger on the street. It is illegal. And you will have to bear the risk of being robbed or swindled.

◆ Major airlines, hotels and travel agencies take international credit cards, such as MasterCard, Visa, Amex, Diner's and JCB. So do most upper-end restaurants, bars and department stores. ATMs are all around the city, most of which take international credit cards and debit cards, but the safest choice is the ATMs under Bank of China, some of which are accessible around the clock at auto-banking outlets in downtown.

Communication

International calls (IDD) and domestic long-distance calls (DDD) can be made directly from hotel rooms. For IDD, dial 00 before country code, area code and number. For DDD, dial 0 before area code and number. IDD and DDD services are also available in business centers in hotels and some large post offices. If you want to make such phone calls in street phone booths, please find those phones marked with IDD and DDD signs. Prepaid phone cards are also available for making IDD calls. You may rent a mobile phone or buy a debit card from hotels or major telecom outlets.

◆ For those who travel with their laptops, Internet access is available in the guest rooms of five-star hotels and some four-star hotels in Shanghai. Business centers of all star-rated hotels provide PCs with fast Internet access. Some venues offer free Internet access, such as Starbucks outlets on prime locations. Or you can check out much cheaper Internet cafes in the city. Wireless service is available in some commercial outlets, such as Starbucks cafes.

◆ For those who plan to stay longer, mobile phones will be a better choice. Prepaid cards are available at the service outlets of China's two biggest mobile phone service providers, China Mobile and China Unicom.

Exhibition Service

A large number of exhibition companies provide professional and high-standard services to exhibition organizers. Some of them are joint ventures between local partners and international giants. Large exhibition companies usually have a strong con-nnection with the local government and its related departments, which helps enhance the efficiency and credibility of their services. Some even boast a solid customer data base that could help exhibitors to reach their targets more easily.

Customs Service

C heck Chinese custom regulations for details before entry. Do mind that:

- ◆ — Print or digital materials, ranging from books, magazines to video tapes and CDs, that are pornographic or have content against Chinese government are prohibited.
- ◆ — Other prohibited items at entry include firearms, illicit drugs, counterfeit currency and endangered animal parts.
- ◆ — Some antiques that are regarded cultural relics can only be brought or shipped out of China when they carry authentic approvals issued by the cultural administration of Chinese government, together with related invoices or export license.
- ◆ — Materials that carry contents involving state secrets are prohibited from being taken out of the country.
- ◆ — Other prohibited items at exit include endangered animals and plants and their specimens.
- ◆ — For business-related customs regulations, please check the official web site of China Customs: www.customs.gov.cn.

Insurance

If your health insurance policy purchased in your home country does not cover you in China, it would be prudent to purchase travel insurance. You may need a policy that pays hospitals directly, instead of requiring you to pay first and reimbursing you later. The best policies will reimburse you for a variety of mishaps such as accidents, illness and theft. The policies are usually available from travel agencies and major insurance companies.

Entry and Visa

Check Chinese custom regulations for details before entry. Do mind that:

- ◆ — Print or digital materials, ranging from books, magazines to video tapes and CDs, that are pornographic or have content against Chinese government are prohibited.
- ◆ — Other prohibited items at entry include firearms, illicit drugs, counterfeit currency and endangered animal parts.
- ◆ — Some antiques that are regarded cultural relics can only be brought or shipped out of China when they carry authentic approvals issued by the cultural administration of Chinese government, together with related invoices or export license.
- ◆ — Materials that carry contents involving state secrets are prohibited from being taken out of the country.

- ◆ — Other prohibited items at exit include endangered animals and plants and their specimens.
- ◆ For tourists, tourist visa, or L-visa, can be obtained at Chinese embassies and consulates worldwide. Also you can book tourist visa through Chinese travel agencies when you sign up in a tour group to China. L-visa is usually valid for one to two months. You should carry your passport with you all the time, since you will be required to show it when checking in at a hotel, buying a flight ticket or changing money. L-visa holders are ineligible to work in China. If you lose your passport, you should immediately contact the embassy of your country and report to the Public Security Bureau.

Other Types of Visa Include:

◆ F-visa (business) — valid for multiple entries over a six-month period. A letter of invitation is usually required.

eigners not working in China, such as family members of expatriates working in China.

◆ Z-visa (work) — issued to foreigners who work full-time in China. Holders are also required to have a work permit and a residency permit issued by Chinese government.

◆ G-visa (transit) — issued to individuals in transit to other countries with overnight layover in China.

◆ J-visa (journalist) — issued to foreign journalists who are reporting in China.

◆ X-visa (student) — issued to students with a letter of invitation from an accredited Chinese institution.

◆ D-visa (resident) — usually for for-

◆ C-visa (flight attendant) — issued to flight attendants of foreign airlines.

WEEKEND getaways

WEEKEND getaways

An old Chinese saying goes, "The paradise is above, and Su-Hang on earth." This Su-Hang actually refers to Suzhou and Hangzhou, two cities with views of heavenly beauty and long-standing reputations as the most popular travel destinations in China. Suzhou boasts a rich heritage of elegant classic gardens, while the picturesque West Lake appeals to visitors. Fortunately, these two cities are so close to Shanghai. Suzhou, in northern Jiangsu Province, is only an hour of car ride from the city, and Hangzhou, in the southern Zhejiang Province, only two hours. Another major tourist destination is Nanjing in Jiangsu Province, which, as capital city for several dynasties in the ancient history of China, abounds in historic relics and cultural heritages. Nanjing is about three hours by train or four hours by bus. Easy accesses make all the three cities perfect choices of weekend getaways.

◆ A gift that the Yangtze Delta has given the small towns and cities in the region is a huge web of waterways. Therefore, on the outskirts of Shanghai as well as in the neighboring Zhejiang and Jiangsu provinces, a number of small towns feature bucolic scenes, which give visitors an impression of the traditional Chinese water and ink paintings. Plentiful waterways crisscross those small towns. Giving them unique characters are those cobblestone alleys, plain houses with pitch black tiles and white-washed walls, and arched stone bridges. Dropping by those small river-side eateries or taking a boat tour on the small rivers would be a mesmerizing experience that rewards your weekends.

Suzhou-A City of Rivers and Gardens

The city of Suzhou dates back to some 2,500 years ago. The long history leaves behind a rich cultural and historic heritage, adding a touch of mesmerizing glamour to Suzhou. Since the city is situated in the center of the Yangtze Delta, rivers crisscross Suzhou, winding through clusters of residential houses that feature white-washed walls and pitch-black tiles. About 42 percent of the city area is covered by water. Centuries-old stone bridges span over the rivers and covered boats pass by under the bridges. The Taihu Lake, one of the four biggest fresh water lakes in China, is in the suburbs of Suzhou. And the Grand Canal goes through the whole city from north to south.

◆ About 60 classical gardens have been well preserved in Suzhou. What appeal tourists are their sophisticated layouts as well as their exquisite designs. Of China's four most famous gardens, two are in Suzhou. And nine gardens in the city have been listed by the UNESCO as the World Heritages.

◆ Silk products, from gown and shirt to scarf and tie, and embroidery are the best souvenirs you must not miss in Suzhou. Kunqu, a local opera from which the Peking opera was developed from, graces the city's stages, while Suzhou-style noodles tantalize your palate with pleasantly sweetish toppings. To preserve the traditional culture and arts, the city has completed 12 museums on such subjects as opera, handicraft, folk lore, garden, embroidery and silk.

Hangzhou-A City on a Beautiful Lake

If Hangzhou is compared to a beautiful woman, the West Lake is her eyes. The legendary West Lake has been an inspiration to many poets and painters for centuries in China. Around the lake are wooded mountains and many historic relics. Longjing, the best of China's green tea, is what visitors should not miss in Hangzhou. A trip to the Tea Museum and the Longjing Village, a small village nestled in the mountain that cultivates the most famous green tea in China, would be rewarding and inspiring. The history of Hangzhou dates back to some 2,200 years ago. The city was one of the top seven capital cities in ancient China. It was the seat of the imperial court in the Southern Song Dynasty (1127-1279).

◆ Streets on the south and west shores of the West Lake have been recently renovated into stylish shopping and leisure strips, on which fashion outlets, tea houses, cafes, restaurants and hotels give Hangzhou a more fashionable look. A number of top luxury brands have opened their stores in a chic-looking shopping complex called European Street. Xi Hu Tian Di is an idea inspired by the Xintiandi in Shanghai. Situated on Nanshan Road on the west side of the Lake, it is a complex of fancy restaurants, cafes and bars. What makes it different from Xintiandi is that it features a stunning view of the West Lake.

Nanjing-A Palatial City

In history, many ancient dynasties established their capitals in Nanjing. The name of the city even literally means the "southern capital". Today, the city is now the capital of Jiangsu Province. Its most famous heritage sites include the mausoleum of Zhu Yuanzhang, the first emperor of the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644), the relics of the Ming-Dynasty palace, Jiming Temple, the relics of the city wall built in the Ming Dynasty, the former presidential office of the Kuomingtang regime, and the mausoleum of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the great revolutionary forerunner of China.

◆ Nanjing Museum, established in 1933, was the National Museum before 1949 and it boasted one of the richest collections of antique items in the country. It said before Chiang Kai-shek withdrew his regime to Taiwan in 1949, he moved many of the precious antique items from the Palace Museum in Beijing to the museum in Nanjing. Unfortunately, he was not able to ship all of them to the island. Many invaluable items are among the collections of the museum today.

◆ As many say that water is life of a city. Nanjing is no exception. Either taking a stroll along the picturesque Xuanwu Lake in down or riding a boat on the Qinhuai River would reward you with an enjoyable time.

Waters

Winding rivers, black-tiled houses and cobble-stoned alleys. Small water towns on the outskirts of Shanghai and even further in the neighboring provinces give people a charming picture of very different lifestyle, another world from the hustle and bustle of a cosmopolitan city. Of these pastoral water towns, the most famous one is Zhouzhuang in Jiangsu Province, about 40 minutes car ride from downtown Shanghai, and the nearest one is Zhujiajiao, located in the western suburbs of the city. The others, which have not drawn huge number of tourists like Zhouzhuang, include Tongli in Jiangsu Province and Wuzheng and Xitang, both in Zhejiang Province.

Zhujiajiao, Shanghai

A heritage town, Zhujiajiao is located in the western Qingpu District, about 30 kilometers from Shanghai Hongqiao Airport. Rivers crisscross this small town, winding through hundreds of old houses that date back to the Ming and Qing dynasties. Giant antique trees, slab-stone alleys, the century-old gardens that used to belong to wealthy families (the most famous one is Kezhi Garden), and fascinating original folk arts and customs add irresistible colors to a tour in Zhujiajiao. Drop by one of many old teahouses in the small town and you will find the aroma lingering beyond your tea cup. Recently Zhujiajiao was voted as one of the top 50 places worth going for overseas travelers.

Tongli, Jiangsu Province

Tongli is situated beside the Taihu Lake and to the east of the ancient canal, about 18 kilometers from Suzhou and 80 kilometers from Shanghai. Crisscrossing rivers divide the 33-hectare Tongli into seven islands, which resulted in the construction of many stone bridges, most of which have been left behind as historic heritage. Tuisi Garden, once a private residential estate, is the most famous tourist destination in Tongli, among scores of other old houses dating back to the Ming and Qing dynasties. In 2003, Tongli was one of the first several small towns in China that won the title of "Famous Historic and Cultural Town in China".

Luzhi, Jiangsu Province

Another well-known water town in the region, Luzhi is about 25 kilometers to the southeast of Suzhou and 75 kilometers from Lujiazui in Pudong. It is a de facto museum of bridges. More than 40 stone heritage bridges, built in the Song, Yuan, Ming and Qing dynasties, are well preserved in this one-square-kilometer small town. Most of these bridges highlight unique designs and delicate craftsmanship of stone carving. An interesting scene you may notice while strolling through the town is the very traditional way many local women dress themselves—a small pink turban draping over the head and a pair of embroidery shoes.

Xitang, Zhejiang Province

Xitang is a water town of rich characters, which dates back to about 1,000 years ago. It is a short bus ride from the railway station of Jiashan County in Jiaxing, Zhejiang Province. The most remarkable scene in Xitang is a long covered corridor that winds about 1,000 meters along the river course. Local residents like to rest under the black-tiled roof of the corridor, sipping their afternoon tea or chatting with their friends. The most mesmerizing moment would be the raining season in the Yangtze Delta region in spring, when visitors could stand on the covered corridor, watching rowing boats pass by on the drizzly river.

Wuzhen, Zhejiang Province

Wuzhen is located in the city of Tongxiang, which is about 140 kilometers from Shanghai. The small town has known for famous scholars that were certified by imperial courts with highest rankings in the country in the past few centuries. Most residential houses that were built in the Qing Dynasty (1644-1912) have been well preserved and the evidences are the delicate craftsmanship of wood and stone carving the pillars, beams, doors and windows of those heritage houses. Local specialties include chrysanthemum, chicken braised in soy sauce, smoked bean tea and silk wadding quilts.

Nanxun, Zhejiang Province

About 120 kilometers from Shanghai, this 740-year-old water town has been a popular sightseeing destination. What makes its private gardens in Nanxun stand out among all the classical gardens in the Yangtze Delta region is their unique architectural style blending both traditional Chinese and modern Western elements. Well preserved historic heritages open to visitors in Nanxun include the former residences of Zhang Shiming, who was a very wealthy collector, and his cousin Zhang Jingjiang, who was a legendary businessman-turned revolutionary, and the guild house that belonged to the first silk guild in the city of Huzhou.

Zhouzhuang, Jiangsu Province

Zhouzhuang, a small water town in Jiangsu Province, sits adjacent to Qingpu District in the west Shanghai. This 900-year-old town is surrounded by several lakes, with many small rivers winding through it. Most noteworthy is Zhouzhuang's well-preserved heritage structures. A dozen of stone bridges, built in the Yuan, Ming and Qing dynasties, are still the major passages today. The most fascinating one is a Yuan-Dynasty bridge called Fu An (literally meaning Wealth and Peace), which features four ornate pavilions with flying eaves, standing on both sides of the bridge. This is the only pavilion-cum-bridge that could be found in the Yangtze Delta area. Wealthy families in the Ming and Qing dynasties have left behind about 100 large houses, of which many feature stunning craftsmanship on wood carving, architectural layout and garden landscaping. The old residence of the Shen's family, one of the richest families in the region in that age, is a most haunted place by tourists today.

Recommended After-Meeting Sightseeing Programs

Classical Garden Tour

Two-day Tour in Suzhou and Wuxi

D1: Leaving Shanghai for Suzhou in the morning

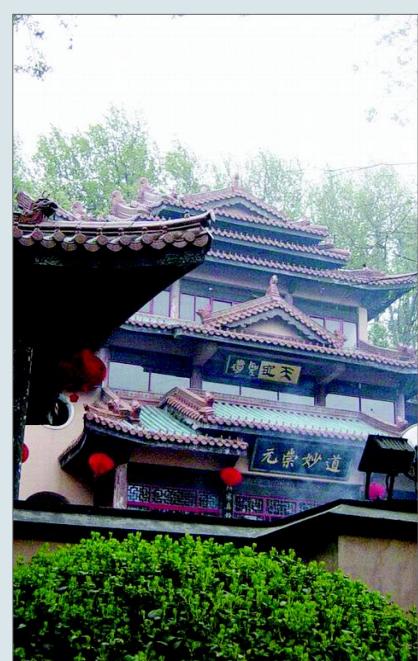

◆ In Suzhou, you may enjoy the appealing heritage of classical gardens, including Canglang Pavilion, Lion Forest Garden, Zhuozheng Garden, Lotus Garden and Yi Garden. All the views in these gardens are sophisticated and poetic, reminding one of the elegant Chinese ink paintings. In addition, your itinerary could include other famous scenic spots in Suzhou, such as Northern Temple Pagoda, Cold Mountain Temple, Shantang Street and Tiger Hill.

Leaving Suzhou for Wuxi in the evening.

D2 : Sightseeing in Wuxi

◆ In Wuxi, classical gardens were built into bigger natural landscapes, particularly the Taihu Lake. What you should not miss are Li Garden, the private garden of the Rong's residence (Rong is one of the richest family in Wuxi and Rong Yiren was former vice president of China), Yuantouzhu and the City of the Tang Dynasty. In addition, a lake cruise trip could be another highlight on your itinerary.

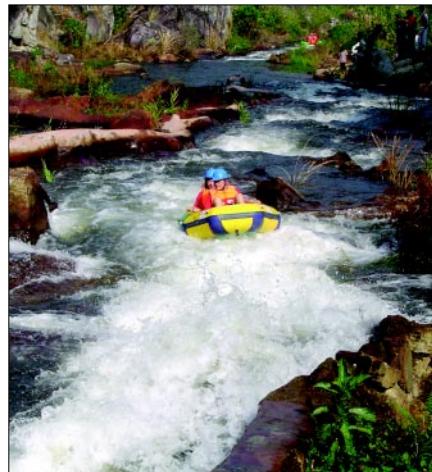

◆ Going back to Shanghai in the evening

Natural Landscape Tour

Two-day Tour in the Big Gorges in western Zhejiang Province and Small Jiuzhai Gully (including Jinxiu Cave)

D1: Leaving Shanghai for Lin'an, Zhejiang Province, in the morning. About four hours on bus. A day of unique experience: raft-floating on the Double Creek, visiting the village on ox cart and visiting the bamboo forest.

D2: Reaching the source of the Taihu Lake and touring the Big Gorges in western Zhejiang Province. Entering Small Jiuzhai Gully and visiting Jiuxiu Cave, Dragon-Beard Cliff and Drunken Flower Waterfall.

Water Town Tour

One-day Tour in Zhujiajiao

A centuries-old town located in the southwestern suburbs of Shanghai, Zhujiajiao is an ideal weekend getaway for people from Shanghai. It is only a stone's throw away from the Dianshan Lake. Major scenic spots in Zhujiajiao include Tongtianhe Chinese Drug Store, the City God Temple, Kezhi Garden, the site of Former Qing-Dynasty Post Office, Yuanjin Temple, Shanghai Ancient Culture Museum and the Art Museum of Silk Road.

■ GETTING TO KNOW Shanghai

■ GETTING TO KNOW Shanghai

In Shanghai, you will not feel alienated or lost if you don't speak Chinese or the local dialect. You would find many young people speak English, the most popular global language. Most signs in downtown areas are bilingual, in both Chinese and English. A lot of websites have English versions. There are English newspapers and magazines. And guest rooms in most five- and four-star hotels have access to international satellite programs, from news channels like CNN and BBC to cultural, sports and entertainment channels such as ESPN, MTV, HBO and Star Sports. No matter how long you stay in town, a plenty of information sources would keep you in tune with what is happening in Shanghai and around the world, what is hot and chick in China's most cosmopolitan city, and what service is available when you feel you need it.

Newspaper & Magazines

Shanghai Daily

Lunched in 1999, Shanghai Daily is the only English daily newspaper in Shanghai. The tabloid-size color-print daily covers the major events that happen in Shanghai everyday as well as the news in China and world. Also strong is its coverage of business, sports, culture and entertainment.

www.shanghaidaily.com

That's Shanghai

One of the earliest publications for English-speaking expatriate community in Shanghai, That's Shanghai has become the most recommendable life guide, thanks to its strong listing of restaurants, night life, entertainment, cultural venues, events and community services.

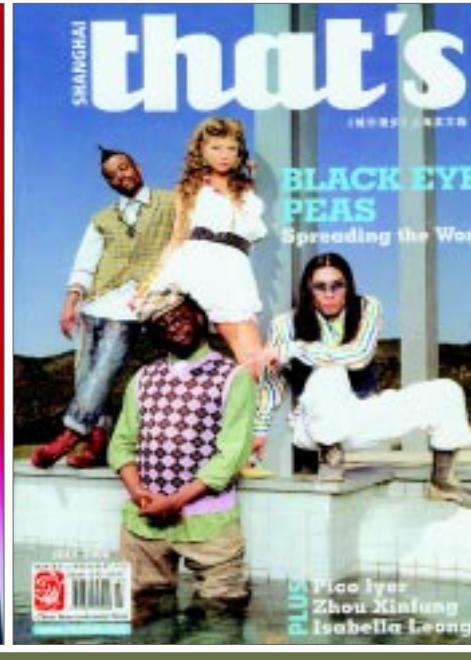

<http://www.thatsshanghai.com>
<http://shanghai.asiapat.com>

Shanghai Business Review

A monthly English-language magazine, Shanghai Business Review provides essential business information, ranging from corporate finance, human resources, taxation, legal and regulatory changes, to corporate structure, marketing, branding strategies and personal finance to top decision-makers of international and domestic companies, lawyers, accountants, bankers, government and consular officials in Shanghai.

<http://sh-businessreview.com>

The other English publications include Shanghai Talk, Shanghai Scene, City Weekend and 8 Days. For Japanese-speaking community, Shanghai Walker, an equivalent of That's Shanghai, is their top guide.
